What's going on at Lincoln Phoenix writers circle?

Lincoln Phoenix Writers Circle meet fortnightly at Birchwood Leisure Centre, Birchwood Avenue, Lincoln on a Friday evening at 7.30 for two hours.

First members of the group back in 1997 included Diane Colosi, Betty Page, Chris Barnett and Pam Fraser whom was the first Chairwoman. The group meet every fortnight to share their work and give feedback on each others writing.

Current Chairwoman Kathleen Drury say's

"I have been a member of the group since January 2010 and got voted as the new chairwoman in October 2010"

The group often have guests to go and talk with them and give a presentation, and they have a few lined up over the next few meetings.

"Speakers coming up include Fiona Linday, Ben Atkinson and Darren Stanton."

Speakers add variety to the meetings as well as provide motivation and inspiration to the members.

"I am incredibly excited that these guests have agreed to come and meet with us! All three have written books and Darren is recording a pilot for a TV show on channel 4!"

The group welcome new members to the join the group and to receive feedback on their work.

"there is no pressure to read anything the first time you attend, we allow members to get a taste for what we do and if they do not want to read the first time this is OK. We also welcome new members to offer their feedback on pieces read, but again there is no pressure to do this the first time they attend" The members that attend currently have known each other several years and are able to give individual feedback based on the individuals style of writing.

"We have a great variety of writers including people that write fiction, non fiction and poetry which makes each meeting new and exciting. Some of our writers are working on novels and its fantastic hearing new chapters each time they read"
